symptom is excitation of the central nervous system. Empty the stomach as quickly as possible, and take the medicine immediately to a doctor. These lovely holiday Christmas decorations which have become so popular in recent years may attract a child who is curious about the taste of the enticingly holly leaves.

These compounds if swallowed cause intense stomach pain, extreme irritation, and may manifest themselves with more severe results.

Should your child swallow any of the "poisonous" ingredients, immediately take steps to empty the stomach, administer milk or olive oil, and take to a doctor.

THE AERONAUT "nose spray" is only dangerous on inhalation of the propellant... the gas which escapes from the container that sprays the "nose."

The "nose" is not dangerous, being only plastic and long-chained fatty acids, but the gas which escapes causes nausea, vomiting, headache and dizziness.

When mouth balls are dropped into the solution, chemical action causes the mouth balls to seem to "dance" but vomit, there may be the chemical reaction of the mouth balls in their mouth, causing local discomforts and burning of the oral cavity.

Again, as in any case of intestinal poisoning, clean the stomach, and take the child to a doctor.

The best care is prevention—keep these items out of the reach of curious youngsters and avoid any children.

DEVIL'S TOWER
The Devil's Tower, a pillar of red lava rising from a forest of evergreens in Wyoming, is the site of the first national monument in the United States by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1906.

CAUTION NEEDED—Six-year-old Maria Blain, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael C. Blain, 220 Chestnut street, holds at arm's length two of three attractive holiday Christmas tree lights. The electric lights, which bubble when they get warm, and have a beautiful, fantastic appearance, are also a great danger to children who might be curious enough to tamper with them.

When taken internally, the chemical fluid inside the candle-shaped candles can cause severe nervous depression, and it will require a lot of stock work on the part of a doctor to prevent a serious poisoning. The Public Health Service has warned the nation of this and other Christmas chemical dangers.

Planning of Christmas cards. William H. Baker, program chairman, arranged the entertainment.

Program Conducted
A program of Christmas music along with a Christmas story was presented at a meeting of the North Branch Christian Church at Stewart, Pa. The church was held last night.

Appearing on the program were: vocal solo, Anne Teal; piano solo, Marsha Taff; and instrumental solo, Robert Richard.

The Left marguerite presented a program entitled "The Christmas Comes to Town."

W. Robert Saylor, president.

In January the meeting will be in charge of the meeting held at the East National and F. Leon Miller, head of the Baptist church.

TAKE CARE, DAVID—Don't stay too close to mommy while she sprays the pretty, white snow on the Christmas tree. The aerosol "nose spray" that mother Mrs. John A. Thomson, Boyertown RD 1, is holding, is one of those new toys, whose development to make Christmas displays more attractive and authentic, but the gas that sprays the plastic snow onto trees and other decorations is also dangerous to children.

Good ventilation is the best prevention of any trouble, and keep the cans away from children. Beads in a gas that causes nausea and serious illness if inhaled in great quantities. There is a danger that the child will be holding up the tree, but the risk him to stand back until the snow cover is applied to the Yuletide spruce.

"Mistletoe can be quite an attraction over the holidays, but is extremely dangerous to take it internally. Clean the stomach, and see a doctor immediately."

A widely circulated pamphlet and how parents can provide a real "big game" for their children.

"Dancing mouth balls," and "mouth balls" are made of sugar and colored water, mixed with sodium bicarbonate.
